2019 Casper College Foundation and Alumni Association • Annual Report

The Bridge Builder

By Will Allen Dromgoole (1860-1934)

An old man going a lone highway,
Came, at the evening cold and gray,
To a chasm vast and deep and wide
Through which was flowing a swollen tide
The old man crossed in the twilight dim,
The sullen stream had no fear for him;
But he turned when safe on the other side
And built a bridge to span the tide.

“Old man,” said a fellow pilgrim near,
“You’re wasting your time in building here;
Your journey will end with the closing day,
You never again will pass this way;
You’ve crossed the chasm, deep and wide,
Why build you this bridge at evening tide?”

The builder lifted his old gray head;
“Good friend, in the path I have come,” he said,
“There followed after me to-day
A youth whose feet must pass this way.
This chasm that has been as naught to me
To that fair-haired youth may a pitfall be;
He, too, must cross in the twilight dim;
Good friend, I am building this bridge for him!”

Every donor helps build a bridge to someone else's future.

It is our pleasure to present the Casper College Foundation's Annual Report for the fiscal year 2018-2019. Because of the generosity of our donors, we have another year of good news to share.

It was a year of change at the foundation. George Bryce and Dick Wheeler, two of our longtime board members, retired from the board after serving 30 and 21 years, respectively. We miss their wisdom. We were thrilled to welcome to our board Judge Catherine Wilking, Jim Thorpen, and Kendall Bryce.

Directly in the office, Linda Nix retired as assistant director of communications, Paulann Doane retired as executive director, Jeannine Earl was hired as chief financial officer, and Denise Bressler was hired as the sixth foundation executive director.

Our support of Casper College and its students remains as strong as ever. We awarded 801 individual students with more than $1.5 million in scholarships and supported Casper College with over $2.4 million in program support. This equates to almost $1,900 per scholarship recipient and $800 in program support per full-time student.

Our net assets still grew by $2.9 million, even after providing the college and its students with all this support. This growth is from both our investment revenue and our donors' charitable giving. Once again, we honored our donors at our Second Annual Donor Luncheon. Well over 100 donors and scholarship recipients attended this wonderful event. We heard from two students who both inspired us and tugged at our heartstrings. We connected our students with our donors and showed them just how much their philanthropy helps. In the future, we believe that many of these students will come to the luncheon as donors themselves.

This year's issue highlights one of the foundation's first major donors and the buildings built with those donations. The buildings on campus were built for the students of that time and also for current and future students. Our past donors had a vision for the future. Because of them, we have a beautiful campus to learn and work in. The "Building Bridges: A Timeline" in the center of this issue shows the buildings as they have been added to the campus over the years. We hope you enjoy learning about each building and, like us, wonder what the future might bring.

A Community of Support

Walking the manicured landscapes of the Casper College campus, it's easy to forget that the college was once filled with prairie grass and sagebrush. A concrete "C" marked the spot where teenagers would park their car and watch the twinkle of the city lights below. Now instead of a C, the Harry T. Thorson Institute of Business houses students studying business. This beautiful campus did not grow out of the ground by itself; it was built through the tenacity, dedication, and generosity of an entire community.

After leaving the third floor of Natrona County High School, the first two buildings erected on the campus were the administration building and a vocational unit. The administration building had 20 classrooms, a bookstore, library, student union, administrative offices, and a gymnasium. By the fall of 1955, enrollment had doubled. Renamed the Leroy Davis Liesinger & Lulu B. Liesinger Administration Building in 1978, it was bustling with students, eager to continue on their educational path. Liesinger Hall remains on campus and is still used for classroom instruction, as well as other campus functions.

Today, the campus boasts 33 buildings and additions. The college has continually improved the offerings and spaces to enhance educational opportunities for students. The college continues to grow after the instrumental work of visionaries like Tilghman Aley, Ph.D. In the 18 years Aley served as the college president, 17 buildings were funded and built on campus. The most recent growth was under the guidance of President Walter H. Nolte, Ph.D. Donors, with the help of the State of Wyoming and the Casper College Foundation, saw five buildings added to campus.

The Residence Hall adds updated living space for students. The Inga Thorson Early Childhood Learning Center provides an enriched learning environment for college students' children to receive important early education while parents attend their classes. The Music Building moved to a state-of-the-art facility that houses the impressive Wheeler Concert Hall for the community and students to enjoy cultural and entertaining events. The Walter H. Nolte Gateway Center was built with student ease in mind by making it easier to enroll and apply for financial aid and scholarships with minimal effort.

There would not be a Casper College success story without its community of support. A community that believes in educational opportunities from technical training to the humanities and fine arts. The community has made it possible for thousands of students to improve their lives. Students that range from young to old give back through their work every day and by sharing their talents with others as they, too, join the growing community of support.

Fred and Babe Goodstein: Investing in the Community

Fred Goodstein came to Casper in 1922 with his new wife, Ida (Babe). An ambitious businessman, he started American Pipe and Supply in 1923 by buying surplus material and salvage equipment in Wyoming's oil fields. By 1965, he had purchased Northern Gas Company, Northern Utilities Company, and was one of the founders of Trigood Oil Company. He owned and developed several downtown Casper properties that still remain: the Petroleum Building, the Goodstein Building, and the Sears and Roebuck Building. He shared his success with the town where he made his fortune.

Fred and Babe were committed to making their home a better place to live. Fred's first gift to the college in 1966 was to complete the construction of the college library. The Goodstein Foundation Library finished construction in the fall of 1967. The dedication ceremony had 1,500 visitors to marvel at the newest building on campus. Babe added another donation to the library by commissioning noted sculptor Jason Seley who created an avant-garde sculpture in front of the library. "The Talisman" is still a prominent sculpture on the Casper College campus. Babe also worked quietly in the community, donating her time to the hospital and the children's home.

After some time, the college began making plans for an expansion to the library due to a growing campus and student population. Once again, Fred answered the call and donated an astounding $1 million. At the time, it was the largest private donation ever made to any Wyoming college. The Casper College Foundation matched Goodstein's funds, making it the foundation's largest donation at the time. The addition to the library was dedicated in 1989. It added 14,000 square feet to the library as well as improved access for disabled patrons at the street entrance, a computer lab, and increased the size of the book collection.

Wyoming's former member of the U.S. House of Representatives, Teno Roncalio, said, "How sweet it is to see a man give it where he made it. Fred Goodstein is Wyoming's nobleman." The Goodsteins didn't stop there. In 1976, the Goodstein Foundation financed the construction and furnishing of the Goodstein Visual Arts Center. When Fred was presented with the plans for the new building, he simply said, "Whatever the college needs, that's what we want to do." The building was completed in 1977.

Today, the library houses a 70,000 volume collection of materials selected specifically for the students and faculty of Casper College. The book collection is supplemented with more than 400 databases and 1,200 electronic journals. Modern updates also include group and private study rooms, two computer labs, computers for student checkout, and an IT help desk. The student Veterans Center and the Casper College Western History Center are also located in the library. The library and its programs continually evolve, serving a changing student population.

'Wyoming's nobleman'

"How sweet it is to see a man give it where he made it. Fred Goodstein is Wyoming's nobleman."

Congressman Teno Roncalio said it Monday upon learning of Casper businessman Goodstein's $1 million gift to Casper College.

To which we add "Amen."
Congressman Roncalio was not gushing about the gift and neither are we.

Casper College President Dr. Tim Aley said it another way:

"Wyoming always will be a better place in which to live as a result of the generosity of Fred Goodstein. We are fortunate to have people who have prospered here and who feel responsibility for the betterment of our state."

"Fred Goodstein realizes and is firmly dedicated to the need for young people properly prepared for the careers available in Wyoming that he stands willing to provide the buildings required if the legislature would see fit to enact the proposal into law," Casper College Board President Donald Chapin said. We agree with this, too.

Casper College has long been the recipient of the generosity of the Goodstein family.

The handsome and functionally-beautiful Goodstein Foundation Library was built at Casper College at a cost of $645,906. The free-form and aesthetically pleasing gift of internationally noted sculptor Jason Seley's "The Talisman" was a gift to the college by Mrs. Goodstein.

And we must never forget the hundreds of generally unrecognized Wyomingites who also gave of their financial resources — many at considerable sacrifice to themselves and family — to make Casper College and Wyoming a better place.

A modest, unassuming man, Fred Goodstein was out of Casper Monday and unavailable for comment. This is the way we know he preferred it. He has always been reluctant to appear in the press and as a result many of the charitable things he has done for Wyomingites has gone unheralded.

We once told Fred Goodstein in discussing the terminal illness of a mutual friend and benefactor to Wyoming that the man had a long, full and worthwhile life. Fred Goodstein replied, "Every man would like one year more."

We wish Fred Goodstein many more years.

"When good men die their goodness does not perish, but lives though they are gone. — Euripides.
The thousands of students — young and old — who come to learn at Casper College after many of us are gone should be reward enough.

to Casper College for a new visual arts building. In the near future, Casper College will break ground on a larger, modern building that will alleviate space constraints and keep the students in a safe environment with updated equipment.

The Goodsteins gave and built with an eye to the future. Fred believed that Casper should be the "nerve and supply center" of Wyoming. He invested accordingly not only in significant endeavors such as the Petroleum Building but also to residents who would benefit from education, then share their talent with the community. Former Casper College President Tilghman (Tim) Aley, Ph.D., said it best, "Wyoming always will be a better place in which to live as a result of the generosity of Fred Goodstein. We are fortunate to have people who have prospered here and who feel responsibility for the betterment of our state." Fred and Babe are only two of the thousands of donors, large and small, who have made an enormous impact on Casper and Wyoming. Every donor that gives, builds a bridge to someone else's future.

"The Talisman," an avant-garde sculpture, was commissioned by Ida Goodstein.
